Protege....All submissions ADDED

Wouldn't it be nice though to have at least one chip from everyone shown in one side by side post? Say for example, everyone's $100 chip for so we can see all the designs at once.

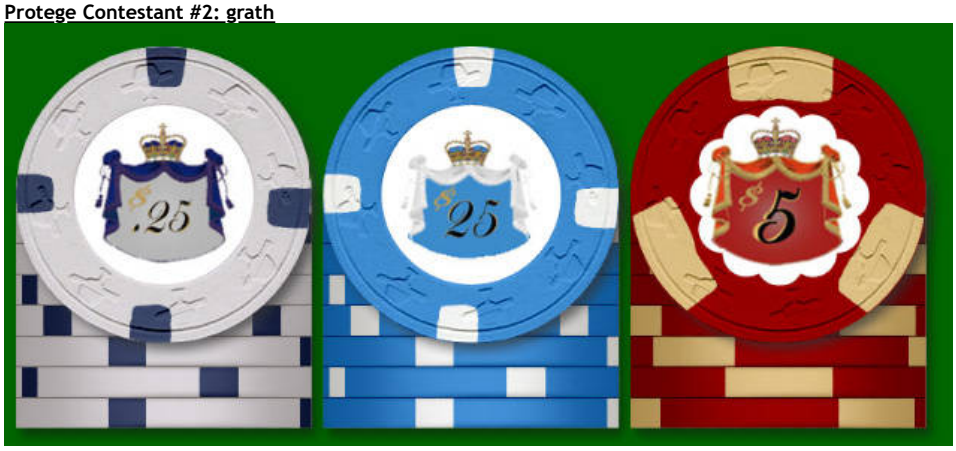

I fear that a lot of people have spent a ton of time designing their inlays but are getting pushed to the side because of a few chips that are obviously generating a great deal of interest (for good reason). I say that only because there were a number of excellent chip color and spot designs done in the first phase that did not get their due review or just got lost in number of posts at that time.

Obviously there are at least two or three blockbuster inlay designs so far, but to me some of the chip colors and edge spot designs may not do justice to the inlay .

Re: Protege question....

Isn't Sidepot planning to do another round of polling to determine an overall winner? Similar to what he did with the colors/inserts. That was my impression anyway.

Re: Protege question....

The focused inlay review process should get everyone their due attention. The only problem is that the 3 focused inlays /day should really be made a "Sticky" to keep them at the top. I think Sidepot is out for the next few days and he posted such. We need a mod to stick the focused inlays each day until he gets back.

It would be cool to put some of them side-by-side but a lot of them are changing daily and I don't think you would get a good comparison. We may have to wait until we get to the voting.

Re: Protege question....

I do think it would be nice to have a sort of running "catalog" of the different designs -- hell, or even a list of the competitors and a descriptive "name" for their design (of course, I suppose that would mean I'd have to come up with a name for my design). It would make it easier to remember whose design was whose at a glance, so -- as one who wants to offer critiques -- you could have an idea as to where you wanted to focus your efforts.

For my part, I'm trying to make sure that I add my thoughts on all of the designs (after all, you never know how a particular chip inlay is going to evolve over the next week -- I've seen some amazing improvements); it may get annoying to some to keep seeing my name crop up, but I'm hoping that on balance, it's easy enough to ignore me. But most especially, I'm making sure to concentrate on the "focused feedback" designs on their assigned days. It may not be as good as a sticky topic, but at least it ensures that the designs are briefly bumped up to the top.

Re: Protege question....

I suggested a catalog of each design in the very beginning... When 20+ new designs came out, it was tough keeping track of them all by author's name... So I suggested a TN of each submission. Never happened.

Re: Protege question....

The only problem with the thumbnails option (which I fully endorse, incidentally) is that someone has to maintain it. A couple of the designs have changed dramatically since their original submission, so you'd want someone to keep on top of those changes. Not that's it's prohibitively difficult, but someone does have to do it.

Welll...I nominate Noelsarchs, as he did start this thread. If a mod needed to take control, Id volunteer. Otherwise I nominate Noel or Sidepot (although Sidepots got a lot going on) and then me, in that order.

We'll see what happens....any other volunteers?

word.

Wouldn't be that hard... Just have each individual person submit it... Everytime you do an update (not a 'hey let's see what this looks like" update, but an actual improvement update), just save the new update in the same spot online as the last update (overwrite the file). Then the TN's update themselves.. Worst case, someone doesn't do that... at least you can recall the "idea"... For example, Matty's black background Pegasus would still remind you what his design looks like, even thought its nothing like the current design.

My only point is so that you could manage the 23 designs and associate them with the author's name...

OK, consider it done. See the first post.

I loaded as many as I could find from the opening post.
